Re: Docket No. 98N-1265

To Whom It May Concern:

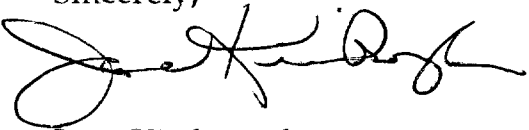

I strongly oppose the draft M.O.U. that has been proposed by the FDA.

The definition of "inordinate amount" in the document restricts my right to order necessary prescriptions by mail. I require micronized doses of natural hormones; I receive them, each month, from a pharmacy which specializes in women's needs. This pharmacy happens to be in another state. I trust their method of preparation and their commitment to my health. And I know of no pharmacy in this state that offers what I need.

There are no commercial substitutes for what keeps me healthy - after years of trying, I have finally found what works. What happens to me, and others like me, if this pharmacy's freedom to ship to all of its out-of-state customers is limited?

Is it possible that, in America, patients are to be forbidden to purchase what our doctors have prescribed for us? I hope not.

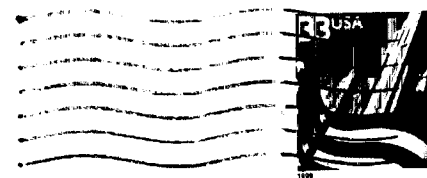

I'm counting on your good judgment to rule in favor of our right to order from specialty pharmacies.

Sincerely,

Jane Kimbrough
